

Weird and wonderful!

KELLY LE BROCK made the transition from highly-paid covergirl model to feted actress almost too easily.

"It was so easy that it was scary," she recalls.

"I thought maybe I wasn't doing something right or maybe it should have been harder."

But Kelly's winning combination of good looks and talent have made her hot property. She rocketed to attention in the title role in The Woman In Red, with Gene Wilder, and is up to weird and wonderful tricks in a new video release from CIC-Taft — Weird Science.

She plays Lisa, a "superwoman" conjured from the electronic ether by two computer whiz-kids, played by Anthony Michael Hall and Ian Mitchell-Smith.

Inspired by a Frankenstein movie, they set to work, and in a crescendo of thunder and lightning, Lisa appears.

She's beautiful, brainy and gives the lucky lads the sort of education they could never have received from a computer!

COMING soon to video — the Michael J. Fox hit movie Teen Wolf. More later. Meantime, Back To The Future, featuring the Family Ties star, is back on top in America as number one video.

MORE behind-the-scenes moves as Vestron Video switches its distribution from Thorn-EMI to PolyGram.

PAUL HOGAN'S box-office blockbuster Crocodile Dundee, which has so far grossed more than $20 million in Australia (in just 10 weeks!), has been secured for video release worldwide by CBS-Fox. But don't go rushing to your video store just yet...

TEEN sensations of the late Sixties, The Monkees, celebrate their 20th anniversary later this year — and a series of videos, each containing two episodes of the group's TV series, is set for release. The Monkees — or at least a couple of them, singer Davey Jones and guitarist Peter Tork — recently toured Australia. In America they have been joined for further concerts by drummer Mickey Dolenz. The fourth member, Mike Nesmith, is too busy running his own video company to be bothered with the tour. An album and concert video are tipped to follow.

Dance, dance, dance

EXHILARATING dance routines were a hallmark of the great musicals from the Golden Years Of Hollywood — and some of the best examples have been gathered together in That's Dancing, a new video release from CEL.

The film was the brainchild of Jack Haley jnr, who went through more than 800 films to gather material for this special.

That's Dancing is broken into six segments, each hosted by masters of different dance styles.

Gene Kelly narrates The Berkley Years; Sammy Davis jnr looks at the stylists of the Thirties — such as Fred and Ginger (above); and Mikhail Baryshnikov looks at ballet and classic dance styles.

Ray Bolger, who played Scarecrow in The Wizard Of Oz, covers the golden years of the Forties and Fifties; Liza Minnelli looks at the Best Of Broadway; and Gene Kelly checks out contemporary dance styles.

The most remarkable thing is that all this energy, style and inventiveness is available on video for less than $20!
